THINGS TO KNOW

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

Do you think the government shutdown will end anytime soon? It doesn't seem that way. I've been reporting on more and more New York City businesses that have stepped up to help furloughed federal workers who are struggling without paychecks, but there hasn't been much news out of Washington about a way to reopen the government. The Senate will vote on two proposals this week, but experts are pretty sure they'll fail. So I turned to New Yorkers to ask them about what they think could finally resolve the shutdown. FLORIDA BANK SHOOTING

A gunman killed five people in a bank in central Florida on Wednesday, then called police himself and eventually surrendered, local authorities said. The shooting occurred at the SunTrust Bank in Sebring, a town of about 10,000 people 95 miles south of Orlando, around 12:30 p.m. ET. Sebring Police Chief Karl Hoglund said at a news conference. The 21-year-old suspect, identified as Zephen Xaver, called police and said he had fired shots inside the bank, according to authorities. After negotiators failed to convince the suspect to leave the bank, the Highlands County Sheriff's Office

SWAT team entered the building and continued to talk to him, police said. He eventually surrendered and is in custody. Police did not offer any details about a possible motive. "Today has been a tragic day in our community," Hoglund said. "We've suffered significant loss at the hands of a senseless criminal doing a senseless crime." No information has been released about the victims. It was not clear whether anyone was wounded. Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis said he has asked the state's department of law enforcement to assist local police officials in the investigation.

CITADEL'S GRIFFIN BUYS NY
CONDO FOR RECORD $238M

Ken Griffin, the billionaire founder of hedge fund Citadel, has paid $238 million for a penthouse condominium overlooking Manhattan's Central Park, a spokesman for Griffin said on Wednesday, in a deal that sets a record for a U.S. home sale. Griffin has closed on the unit in the 79-story residential tower, which is under construction for an estimated cost of $1.4 billion at 220 Central Park South. The purchase follows on the heels of reports that Griffin bought a mansion in London within sight of Buckingham Palace for $124.2 million, among other recent deals. The price paid for the New York condo eclipses the prior record for a U.S. residential purchase, set by another hedge fund billionaire, Barry Rosenstein, for a home in East Hampton, on New York's Long Island in 2014. The Griffin purchase also shatters the record for the most expensive apartment sold in New York City, which was last set by computer company founder Michael Dell's purchase last year of a condo for $100.47 million, according to published reports.

VENEZUELAN OPPOSITION LEADER
DECLARES HIMSELF INTERIM PRESIDENT

Demonstrators protest against the government of Nicolas Maduro at Plaza Altamira after opposition leader and head of the National Assembly Juan Guaido declared himself interim president on Wednesday in Caracas, Venezuela. Several countries such as the United States, Canada, Brazil, Chile, Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Peru, Ecuador and Guatemala officially accepted Guaido. Head of Supreme Justice tribunal Juan Jose Mendoza urged the general attorney to act against a constitution violation.

'THREATS' FORCE COHEN TO POSTPONE TESTIMONY

President Donald Trump's former personal lawyer Michael Cohen is postponing his Feb. 7 testimony to the U.S. Congress because of threats against his family from Trump, his adviser said on Wednesday. Cohen, who has pleaded guilty to crimes including campaign finance violations during Trump's 2016 election campaign and is cooperating with investigators, had received "ongoing threats against his family from Trump" and Trump's lawyer Rudy Giuliani, the adviser, attorney Lanny Davis, said in a statement. Trump called Cohen a "rat" in a tweet last month for cooperating with prosecutors. Cohen had been Trump's self-described longtime "fixer" and once said he would take a bullet for the New York real estate developer. In a Fox News interview this month, and other forums, Trump also suggested he had damaging information on Cohen's father-in-law. "That's the one that people want to look at," Trump said in the interview. Giuliani also referred to possible issues with him. Cohen's father-in-law, Fima Shusterman, could not immediately be reached for comment. He has been involved in the taxicab business like Cohen himself.

NURSE CHARGED WITH RAPE OF DISABLED WOMAN

An Arizona male nurse has been charged with raping a severely disabled woman at the long-term care facility where he worked, a crime that came to light only after she gave birth, prosecutors said on Wednesday. Nathan Sutherland, 36, was arrested by investigators who linked him to the case through DNA evidence after the woman, who is in her 20s, unexpectedly gave birth on Dec. 29 at Hacienda Healthcare Skilled Nursing Facility in Phoenix. "From the minute we first became aware of this crime, a sexual assault, we have worked virtually nonstop every day, every night, seven days a week trying to solve and resolve this case," Police Chief Jeri Williams told a news conference. Williams said the case, which has made international headlines, was solved through a combination of DNA and "good old-fashioned police work." Sutherland, a licensed practical nurse who began working at Hacienda Healthcare in 2012, was charged with one count each of sexual assault and abuse of a vulnerable adult. He was ordered held on $500,000 bail during a brief appearance in Maricopa County Superior Court.

The U.S. Senate will vote on two proposals to end the government shutdown this week.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

As the partial federal government shutdown stretches into its 34th day on Thursday, the U.S. Senate will hold competing votes on two ways that this could all end: a Republican proposal that would give President Donald Trump his requested $5.7 billion for the border wall, and a bill from Democrats that would reopen the government through Feb. 8 with no money for the wall.

But both proposals may fail, experts say, with neither expected to achieve the necessary 60 votes to pass the Senate, prolonging the government shutdown as federal employees face their second missed paycheck.

Trump previously took responsibility for the shutdown, which is affecting more than 800,000 federal employees and even more Americans who rely on government services.

"If we don't get what we want ... I will shut down the government. And I am proud to shut down the government for border security," he told Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer and House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi in December. "I will take the mantle. I will be the one to shut it down. I'm not

New Yorkers answer, 'What could end the government shutdown?'

"I think that [Trump] just needs to stop being so stubborn, that's it. I guess this is all because of the wall, so he's just stubborn and trying to get that passed so he can put it up. That's something that, you know — I feel like everybody has a project with these politicians, and at some point you have to realize to let it go, so I think it's just his pride. I remember when [former NYC Mayor Michael] Bloomberg wanted to get the stadium built in New York for the Olympics and at some point he realized it wasn't going to get done and instead of keeping on fighting it, he just let it go. I think that's a big part of it."

going to blame you for it."

Now, though, with no end to the government shutdown in sight, Americans are throwing blame across the board.

Forty-two percent of voters blame Trump, according to a new Emerson College poll, and 36 percent blame the Democrats. Six percent blame the Republicans, and 16 percent blame "everyone."

Voters are also split on Trump's proposal to end the government shutdown by offering temporary protections for DACA recipients, or "Dreamers." Fifty-five percent oppose that deal, but 45 percent support it, according to the poll.

In general, voters are in favor of increasing immigration law enforcement at our borders (55 percent in favor, 24 percent opposed), but they're divided on whether or not Trump's border wall is the solution. Fifty-nine percent believe it could be a solution, per the Emerson poll, and 41 percent say it's not.

Amid the government shutdown debate, Trump's approval is dropping. The president's job approval rating dropped to 52 percent disapproval and 42 percent approval in January, compared to 47 percent disapproval and 43 percent approval in December, according to Emerson Polling.

If the Democrats, Republicans and president can't find a solution to the shutdown, how will this ever end? We asked New Yorkers what they think will happen, and what they would do if they were in charge.

Yomary Delvalle, 22, Manhattan, dog and cat sitter

"If Trump stops being an a—hole and builds the wall himself. I think he should just put his own money in it. If he wants it so bad, then go right ahead and put your own money to it."

Aidan Farrell, 20, Manhattan, student

"I'm not intelligent enough to give a proper response to [ending the shutdown]. I don't think [the Dreamer deal] will happen."

It's going to start really affecting people's lives, so when that comes around, I think push will come to shove and Trump will crack with less demands."

Slowdown in NYC's construction boom

Construction has been booming lately, but it may have finally peaked, Department of Building data shows.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

New York City construction seems never-ending, but after years of a development boom, there are signs that building activity is slowing down across the five boroughs.

The NYC Department of Buildings issued a total of 165,988 construction permits in 2018, down from 168,243 in 2017, according to data released this week.

That's still a lot of permits — the second-highest total on record — but it's the first decline in total permits issued year-over-year since 2009, showing that city construction could be leveling off.

"While construction activity remains strong, the building boom may have finally hit its peak," said Buildings Commissioner Rick D. Chandler in a statement.

Those 2018 New York City construction projects will add 46 million square feet, or more than 1.5 square miles, of new floor space to the city. That's on par with 2017, but a big drop from 2015, when approved proposed construction totaled 93 million square feet of new building space.

The largest portion of all that new space will be in Manhattan, which accounted for 72,004 total permits in 2018, around 43 percent of all construction permits issued citywide. Brooklyn is still seeing a lot of building activity, too, as home to the most new building permits issued in 2018 at 2,756 total, or 34 percent citywide.

Within Brooklyn, Williamsburg and Greenpoint had the most activity with 414 permits issued for new building construction, much of which is along the L train corridor, according to the department.

Then there are demolition permits, for which Flushing, Queens, stood out. Flushing leads all community boards citywide in demolition projects (148 total) and major alteration projects (446 total).

These demolitions are "almost certainly indicators" of future redevelopment based on past trends, said Andrew Rudansky, DOB rep. The highest levels of demolition activity are in Williamsburg, Bushwick, Borough Park, Midtown Manhattan, Long Island City and Flushing, but demolitions are still down citywide.

"Space is definitely at a premium in New York City. Compared to other cities around the country we have less space and higher density," he said in an email. "This has created a unique situation in New York City where demolitions are almost always followed by redevelopment at a quick turnaround, as developers tear down old buildings to make the necessary room for new developments."

DOB issued 2,092 demolition permits citywide in 2018, down from 2,290 in 2017.

Mirroring the citywide drop in New York City construction permits, there's also been a decrease in the number of employed construction workers. According to U.S. Department of Labor estimations, the employed construction workforce in New York City has decreased from an all-time high of 46,000 last year to 45,500, marking the first estimated decrease in construction employment here since the 2008 financial crisis.

But why this drop at all, after years of a real estate boom that had many wondering when it would ever end?

Stijn G. Van Nieuwerburgh, real estate and finance professor at Columbia University's Graduate School of Business, believes that the residential construction market has peaked because of three main factors.

"First, the business cycle has peaked nationwide. Second, New York City is particularly hard-hit by the tax reform which went into effect in 2018 and will become even more salient once people file their 2018 taxes in the next few months," Van Nieuwerburgh said in an email. "The change in [state and local tax] deductions and property tax/mortgage interest deductions hit the New York City property market hard."

Finally, he added, the city saw a "veritable condo construction bonanza, especially in the luxury segment," leading to an oversupply.

"The economy is still strong," he noted, "but as it becomes clearer that we are past peak and fundamentals start to deteriorate, I expect permits to fall substantially more in 2019."

Guilty plea leads to anger management for Alec Baldwin

The actor was also ordered to pay a fine after pleading guilty to second-degree harassment.

Actor Alec Baldwin on Wednesday agreed to take anger-management training, as he pleaded guilty in a Manhattan court to a harassment charge for a November confrontation in which he was accused of punching someone over a parking spot.

The 60-year-old actor, currently known for his impersonation of President Donald Trump on NBC's "Saturday Night Live," pleaded guilty to second-degree harassment before a judge ordered him to pay a $120 fine and to return to court in March to show that he had completed the anger-management class.

When the judge asked Baldwin if he was pleading guilty and understood the conditions he replied, "yes sir."

Dressed in a dark business suit, burgundy-colored scarf and eyeglasses, Baldwin did not speak to reporters before or after the hearing.

Police said Baldwin was arrested on Nov. 2 and charged with misdemeanor assault and harassment. He was released the same day and was met by a swarm of camera crews.

"Normally, I would not comment on something as egregiously misstated as today's story. However, the assertion that I punched anyone over a parking spot is false. I wanted to go on the record stating as much."

Baldwin's Foundation
Twitter Account

Officials did not name the other driver involved in the incident, but local media identified him as Wojciech Cieszkowski, a construction business owner. He told the New York Post one day after the altercation that he felt "sore," but was recovering after allegedly getting punched.

At the time, Baldwin denied striking anyone.

"Normally, I would not comment on something as egregiously misstated as today's story," a post on his foundation's Twitter account said after the incident. "However, the assertion that I punched anyone over a parking spot is false. I wanted to go on the record stating as much."

Baldwin won an Emmy Award in 2017 for his scathing impressions of Trump. He is also known for portraying network executive Jack Donaghy in NBC's "30 Rock" sitcom.

Baldwin has a history of losing his temper. In 2014, he was given a summons for disorderly conduct after an argument with police when he was stopped for riding his bike down a one-way street in New York. It was not clear what followed the summons notice.

In 2011, he was thrown off an American Airlines flight after refusing to stop playing a game on his phone before takeoff.

A year later, Baldwin denied punching a photographer who was trying to take photos of him with his then-fiancée and now wife, yoga teacher Hilaria Thomas.

World's best hearing aids?

Hi-tech hearing aid trials to take place in New York and they're looking for locals with hearing difficulties.

Connect Hearing is partnering with Phonak, the world-leading hearing aid manufacturer, to evaluate their bold claims about the new Phonak Audéo™ Marvel hearing aids in a major national Consumer Study and product trials. In gratitude for their involvement, participants to receive a FREE $50* gift card from their choice of leading retailers.

It is estimated that around 48 million Americans are significantly affected by hearing loss. When untreated, they struggle in social situations, particularly noisier environments where it becomes tiring and difficult to engage in conversation.

Over time, this increases feelings of isolation, frustration, and leads to lower incomes¹, in part due to decreased effectiveness in the workplace. It also leads to increased risk of serious health issues, including depression, decline in memory and concentration, and even early onset dementia².

Despite these issues, just 14 percent of those who could benefit from hearing aids use them³. Many are put off by perceived limitations of hearing aids, including: 'tinny' sound quality, being awkward for people with dexterity issues, and not wanting a hearing aid that others can see.

According to leading audiologist, Pauline Dinnauer, from Connect Hearing, there could now be a new hearing aid that overcomes these limitations better than ever before:

"The Phonak Audéo™ Marvel is the result of years of extensive research and development, focusing on user expectations and requirements for a clear, rich sound experience... research papers released by the manufacturer indicate that 'Marvel' achieves some remarkable results for wearers."

Despite Marvel hearing aids being super-discreet and comfortably sit behind your ear, they are packed with the most advanced features for modern hearing aids wearers.

Marvel adjusts automatically to match every listening situation, without wearers needing to think about or tweak hearing aid settings.

Cutting-edge lithium-ion rechargeable battery technology, ensures that Marvel hearing aids charge quickly for a full day of hearing and streaming. Hassle-free with no more disposable batteries to change.

Marvel is the first ever hearing aid that seamlessly stream audio from iPhones and Android smartphones, and other Bluetooth® enabled phones, into both ears. Wearers can even take hands-free phone calls when their phone is out of reach, due to built-in microphones that pick up their voice and call answering with a simple push of a button on their hearing aids.

Phonak's myCall-to-Text app transcribes phone conversations into text on their mobile phone. Users can read along and not miss a word, with background noise never getting in the way of communication.

Between now and the end of March 2019, Connect Hearing will be undertaking national Consumer Study and product trials to evaluate whether the Phonak Audéo™ Marvel are, in fact, the most "liked" hearing aids in the world. And they need your help!

- Do you find it difficult to follow conversations in noisy environments (e.g. restaurants, large gatherings)?
- Do you wear hearing aids, but want to know if another solution could make hearing easier and clearer?

If you answered "yes" to either of those questions, then you would be a perfect candidate.

Emma Coronel Aispur, wife of Joaquin "El Chapo" Guzman, arrives at U.S. District Court on Wednesday. GETTY IMAGES

Wife of 'El Chapo' played key role in escape plots, says ex-lieutenant Damaso Lopez Nunez claims Emma Coronel carried tunnel-digging messages from her hubby.

The wife of accused Mexican drug lord Joaquin "El Chapo" Guzman played an important role in plotting his 2015 escape from a Mexican prison and tried to help him escape again after he was recaptured the following year, one of Guzman's former top lieutenants testified on Wednesday.

Guzman's wife, Emma Coronel, has attended nearly every day of her husband's trial in federal court in Brooklyn, New York. She was there on Wednesday as Damaso Lopez Nunez testified that Coronel carried messages from her imprisoned husband about digging a tunnel into his cell.

Guzman, 61, was extradited to the United States in 2017 and has been on trial since November on charges of trafficking cocaine, heroin and other drugs into the country as leader of the Sinaloa cartel. His lawyers have claimed he was framed by another powerful drug trafficker, Ismael "El Mayo" Zambada.

Lopez, 52, is serving a life sentence in U.S. prison for drug trafficking, and has said he is cooperating with prosecutors in the hope of getting the sentence reduced. He has testified that he began working for Guzman in 2001 and is godfather to one of his former boss' twin daughters.

Lopez told jurors that, while Guzman was held in Mexico's Altiplano prison in 2014 and 2015, he plotted his boss' escape with Coronel and Guzman's sons, with Coronel passing messages to and from Guzman.

Lopez said the sons bought a plot of land near the prison from which to tunnel into Guzman's cell. Guzman escaped through the finished tunnel in 2015.

Guzman was recaptured in January 2016. Lopez said Coronel told him the following month that Guzman, then at Altiplano, wanted to duplicate his earlier escape.

That plan was thwarted when Guzman was moved to another prison in Ciudad Juarez, Lopez said, and a $2 million bribe to a national prison official to get him moved back was unsuccessful. Lopez did not identify the bribed official.

Despite her alleged role in both escape attempts, Coronel has never been charged with a crime. John Marzulli, a spokesman for the U.S. prosecutors, declined to comment.

When Lopez first stepped up to the witness stand on Tuesday, he looked at Guzman and bumped his fist to his chest. Asked by one of Guzman's lawyers on cross-examination Wednesday why he made the gesture, Lopez answered, "Because I love him."

Nonetheless, Lopez said, "the circumstances" compelled him to testify.

"I chose to think about my family," he said.

The Powerful (and little known) Back Pain Treatment Used By Smart New Yorkers Who Don't Want Back Surgery or Opioid Drugs

NEW YORK CITY - A major back pain relief opportunity is at hand. But if you are interested, you must act quickly.

Here is why: Back pain ruins lives... and puzzles doctors.

You go through so many exams and tests... and treatments... and only end up suffering and frustrated.

And everyone is quick to say they have the "new breakthrough solution."

Am I right?

Well, the fact of the matter is... treating back pain is difficult. But advances in modern medical science and technology have created a treatment that has gotten great results with countless back pain sufferers who had tried everything else. Many had given up hope.

This treatment is called:

"Radiofrequency Neurotomy." RF for short. And here's how it works...

RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

There are many nerves around your back or neck and one of their jobs is to sense PAIN.

Radiofrequency waves delivered to these nerves under advanced precision medical imaging to target the damaged areas... done right in their own clinic without intimidating, expensive hospitals or surgical centers ... to "block" the painful nerve flow.

Two steps in the formula are performed. First, a test or diagnostic "Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function. If this first "test" procedure is successful, RF Neurotomy or "Radiofrequency" will be performed for longer term relief.

NOT just the Treatment alone that's the key ingredient.

You see, the real secret is the formula. And that again starts with a proper screening evaluation to determine if you are a good candidate and may achieve the results you are looking forward to. This is always Step number one.

And the best part about this screening is... It's FREE

FREE screening available for powerful back pain treatment

This screening will give you so much relief just knowing what is going on... and what your best options are.

That's right. NYC Pain MD offers this first step screening at no cost to patients. The only problem is... they often get over 100 inquiries a day as they also treat almost every painful area and joint. Sometimes it's hard to get through. If you don't get through to someone when you call... keep calling... or leave a message... it will be well worth it.

But that's just the first step

After your free screening, if you qualify, the doctors will discuss the best treatment plan for you in a way that you will understand completely. Not all complex "doctor talk"...

This may be one... or a combination of the advanced medical treatments offered at NYC Pain MD.

Everything will be explained and all your questions will be answered. And even better:

You will be given all this At NO COST. NYC Pain MD doc's are not like used car salesman. They will not be giving you a sales pitch. They are doctors and will give you the best possible options to help your pain and offer to help you the best way they can. In fact, with up to 100 inquiries a day from patient's looking for relief, it's often hard to even get a treatment spot.

You should also know this: While NYC Pain MD cannot help everyone... so many have gotten the pain relief they were looking for.

One of the reasons they offer those first step free screenings, is because it has opened the door to so many people to get help that they never would have otherwise.

At the very least, you will finally have some direction and a plan. And... whether you have the best, worst or no insurance at all, NYC Pain MD programs can be made affordable to everyone.

They do not want insurance issues... or not being rich or famous... to keep you away if you are suffering in pain.

How To Schedule Your Risk-Free No-Obligation Screening Evaluation

There is a whole lot more I could say about their treatments etc... but this space is limited and that's best left for you and the doctors to discuss in person.

So... if you are even remotely interested ... take the first step and give them a call at 877-245-9252 and ask for your free screening.

One more thing... We often get over 100 calls in a single day. For that reason, if when you call you do not get a live scheduling coordinator, make sure to leave your name, number and time of your call on our voicemail. They will get back to you as soon as possible. Again, the number to call is 877-245-9252. More info at: painmdny.com/back-pain

Brother Jimmy's stepping up to help out federal workers impacted by shutdown

Here's the latest on opportunities to get free food as a furloughed federal worker.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Federal employees around New York City have even more opportunities for free meals as the partial government shutdown continues on.

After a few free meal opportunities earlier this week, businesses in New York City and beyond are continuing to step up and support furloughed federal employees who soon may face their second missed paycheck.

Brother Jimmy's, a New York-based, North Carolina-style barbecue joint began offering free lunch to federal employees on Wednesday, which

Brother Jimmy's BBQ at Eighth Avenue and 31st Street is offering free lunch to federal employees this week. GETTY IMAGES will run through Friday.

Jimmy himself (founder Jimmy Goldman) was recently traveling to St. Martin out of JFK Airport when he overheard a TSA employee asking a colleague to borrow money for lunch, according to the company, inspiring him to lend a helping hand.

Federal employees will need to show a valid ID at participating Brother Jimmy's locations to redeem the offer. Workers affected by the shutdown can head to Brother Jimmy's on Lexington Avenue or at Madison Square Garden in New York City, and in Stamford, Conn.; West Palm Beach, Fla.; White Plains, N.Y.; and National Harbor, D.C./Md.

The restaurant is offering a curated special lunch menu for federal employees. Menu items include Sloppy Jimmy with a side of coleslaw; two pork sliders with a side of mac & cheese; Cobb salad wrap with grilled chicken; veggie quesadillas; two pulled chicken tacos with a side of coleslaw; two cheeseburger sliders with a side of fries; pulled chicken wrap with a side of string beans; turkey burger with a side of fries; six buffalo wings with a side of tater tots; or two pulled pork tacos with a side of coleslaw. All meals are served with choice of Coors Light, Miller Lite Draft, iced tea or soda.

Along with Brother Jimmy's, The Emma L. Bowen Community Service Center, which offers everything from therapeutic preschool to elderly care services at 1727 Amsterdam Ave., is expanding its food pantry specifically for federal employees affected by the government shutdown.

Advance sign-up is required by email or phone to make sure there's enough food stocked up for those in need. You can register by emailing foodpantry@bowencsc.org or calling 212-683-5792.

Federal workers will need to bring their government employee ID to pick up the food. This service begins Thursday, Jan. 24, from 1 to 4 p.m., and will continue Tuesday through Thursday every week of the government shutdown, according to the center.

Nationwide, large companies are helping out furloughed federal employees as well, like Sweetgreen, which is offering a free signature bowl to federal employees with their government ID on Saturday, Jan. 26, from 6 to 8 p.m.

This will be offered at all Sweetgreen locations across the country, and the fast-casual chain has plenty throughout New York City.

After a hung jury last year, Chanel Lewis is finally getting a second trial.

Retrial for Karina Vetrano's accused murderer set for March

After a hung jury forced a mistrial in 2018, an N.Y. judge allows a retrial of Chanel Lewis in March.

WILL DRICKEY
will.drickey@metro.us

Accused of killing Karina Vetrano in 2016 in Howard Beach, Queens, Chanel Lewis' first trial ended with a hopelessly deadlocked jury, causing a State Supreme Court justice to rule the case a mistrial. In a hearing on Tuesday, the same judge has set the process in motion again, beginning March 12.

"Going to get this over with," said Philip Vetrano, the victim's father, after the hearing. "I'm disappointed that we have to go through it again."

The original trial ended on Nov. 20, 2018, with a hung jury after 17 hours of deliberation. Jurors were unable to reach an agreement that the prosecution's evidence, which included a taped confession and DNA evidence an expert witness said linked Lewis to the crime scene, was definitive enough to convict him without a reasonable doubt.

The case was mired in controversy over the methods police used to obtain their evidence. According to Lewis' defense attorney from the Legal Aid Society, the NYPD obtained their evidence from an illegal stop-and-frisk arrest. Additionally, The Daily Beast reported that Lewis' confession to detectives seemed to have been coerced and coached, and that the DNA test the prosecution used was notoriously unreliable and inconclusive.

"The description of the crime seems like a narrative that may have been fed to him," Steven A. Drizin, a former legal director of the Center on Wrongful Convictions told The Daily Beast. "That he just snapped. That he just lost it. People just don't lose it, beat women to death, strangle them, and pull their clothes down for no reason. Because he's angry that his neighbors played music too loud? That raises concerns for me."

After his defense team moved to have the case declared a mistrial, Lewis was sent back to Rikers Island to await a second hearing, where he has reported of inhumane conditions.

"Captains are trying to tell inmates to beat me up," he claimed to the New York Post, who described his reports of abuse by both guards and fellow prisoners as "whining."

Prior to his arrest for the murder of Vetrano, Lewis lived with his mother in Brooklyn and attended a private school for "children experiencing emotional and behavioral problems."

"The death of Karina Vetrano is tragic and our hearts go out to her family ... but the rush to criminalize our client is not the answer nor is it justice."

Legal Aid Society

"The death of Karina Vetrano is tragic and our hearts go out to her family," the Legal Aid Society stated after the mistrial was first declared, "but the rush to criminalize our client is not the answer nor is it justice."

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It’s Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it’s complex. In other words, it’s not a simple, easy fix.

But I’m sure you already know that. Or you wouldn’t be reading this.

That’s the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It’s amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

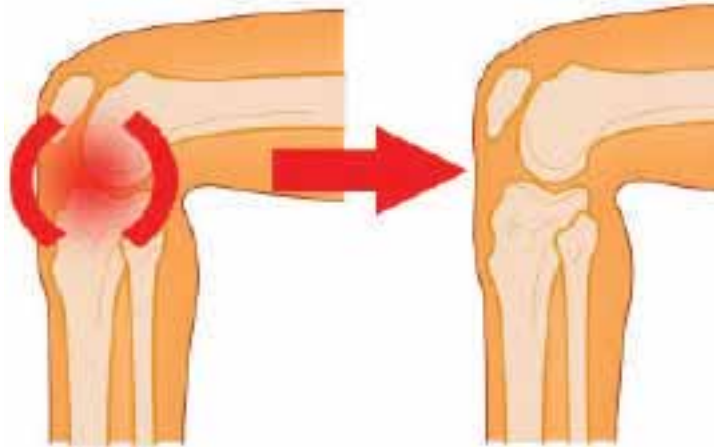

While I can’t give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here’s What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what’s going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what’s going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I’m out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Trump vows State of Union alternative

House Speaker Pelosi denied access to the House for his State of the Union.

President Donald Trump said on Wednesday he would do an alternative event to the State of the Union address after House Speaker Nancy Pelosi told him he may not give the speech in the House of Representatives until the government shutdown is over.

The clash between two of Washington's most powerful leaders represented an escalation in a standoff that has resulted in a 33-day partial government closure that threatens the U.S. economy and the livelihoods of 800,000 federal workers.

On Pelosi's move to lock him out of the House, Trump said at a White House meeting on border security, "It's a disgrace."

Pelosi told the president that for now, she would not consider a measure authorizing the speech, an annual, televised rite in American politics traditionally delivered in the House chamber.

"Again, I look forward to welcoming you to the House on a mutually agreeable date for this address when government has been opened," Pelosi said to Trump in a letter.

Earlier in the day, Trump essentially dared her to disinvite him from making the speech, which was set for Jan. 29.

The State of the Union speech, used by presidents to announce their policy goals for the year, has become a hostage to the showdown between Trump and congressional Democrats over his demand for money for a U.S.-Mexico border wall.

About a quarter of the government has been shut down since Dec. 22, when some agencies' funding expired for reasons unrelated to border security or immigration. Trump at first expressed support for legislation to restore the agencies' funding. Then he demanded that any shutdown-ending measure must contain $5.7 billion for the border wall, funding Democrats oppose.

House Democrats have approved several measures to fully reopen the government, but none have won approval in the Senate, which is controlled by Trump's fellow Republicans. Test votes on related measures were scheduled for Thursday in the Senate.

Pelosi suggested on Jan. 16 that Trump postpone the speech because of the closure, citing concerns about security for the event. Earlier on Wednesday, Trump tried to brush aside Pelosi's concerns and said he planned to deliver the address before the U.S. Congress as scheduled next Tuesday.

"It would be so very sad for our Country if the State of the Union were not delivered on time, on schedule, and very importantly, on location!" Trump wrote to Pelosi.

The president is required to give Congress a report on the nation, but is not required to deliver it in a live, televised address before lawmakers. Many past presidents have delivered it in writing.

'CSI: DOG POOP ON THE SIDEWALK'

Like humans can be linked to crime by DNA left at the scene, can dogs be identified by DNA in their poop? I had this thought after navigating the minefield left by dog owners in the middle of the sidewalk outside my apartment building.

When a dog owner applies for a license and a chip gets implanted in their animal companion to track them if they get lost, can the dog's DNA also be on file so their owners can be traced and fined for not picking up after them??

Charlie Cox and writer Joe Penhall break down their film on the Hatton Garden robbery.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

Even though four years haven't even passed since the crime was committed, "King of Thieves" is the third film about the Hatton Garden safe-deposit burglary, which saw at least four elderly men take over $250 million in goods.

With all due respect to the others, the fact that it stars Michael Caine, Ray Winstone, Tom Courtenay, Michael Gambon, Jim Broadbent and Charlie Cox, makes it is the most legitimate production about the incident thus far.

How true is 'King of Thieves?'

Cox, who was cast just a few days before rehearsal began, was instantly starstruck, as he couldn't believe he was even "allowed to be in the same room" as the other legendary actors.

"I was kicking around, chatting with these guys, rehearsing with them, shooting scenes, and they are all my heroes."

The parallels between the elderly cast of "King of Thieves" and their real-life characters only added to the sense of occasion for Cox.

"I think given their age, and all due respect to them obviously, there was something nice about the idea that for these thieves in real life this was literally their last big hurrah," says Cox. "Of course, all of these actors will go on to do many more films, but there was a sense that this was one big last hurrah from an acting point of view, with those guys as the lead roles. So it was art imitating life."

Caine has eyed the leading part of Brian Reader, the leader of the misfit group of criminals, for years, while writer Joe Penhall used two articles, as well as "an extraordinary 100-page transcript from Scotland Yard," to make the film as truthful as possible.

"I think the film is pretty truthful," Penhall tells Metro. "But what interested me most is that, while it is a very infamous robbery they were a very banal bunch of people. I'm kind of interested in the banality of thieves and con man.

Former "Daredevil" actor Charlie Cox stars in "King of Thieves." STUDIO CANAL

GETTY IMAGES

"There's a risk in trying to make a film about people like that. But this cast got as close as you can to pulling off that sense of banal, suburban, aging men, who have run out of options, as opposed to general heist movie fodder."

The transcripts at Penhall's disposal allowed the screenwriter to meticulously learn "how the gang spoke and thought," while they also possessed little gems of material that "you really couldn't make up."

"At one point they discussed a large haul, with very cheap rings and they didn't know what to do with them," says Penhall. "They were trying to work out whether or not they could melt the gold or burn the diamonds. I mean these guys were experts."

"They were also endlessly self-serving. Every single one of them seemed to be lying," he adds. "They lied to each other. They lied about each other. They all thought that they were the boss. They all thought that they had been hard done by. So the story emerged from the transcript."

James Marsh was the perfect director to bring Penhall's "King of Thieves" script to life, as the filmmaker, who has background in documentaries, wanted to recreate the heist with all of its "odd details."

"Inevitably there's all this commercial pressure to try to shape it and mold it and jolly it up and give it some of the bells and whistles of a heist movie," admits Penhall, but, for Cox, that was all inherently in the robbery anyway.

"There's a brazenness to it. A boldness to it, that is so, so, not English," Cox adds. "But as Englishmen, we kind of love it."

"King of Thieves" is in select theaters and available on VOD Jan. 25.

Ted Bundy is the subject of the new Netflix docuseries. NETFLIX

Joe Berlinger returns to true crime with Ted Bundy Netflix documentary

The acclaimed filmmaker is a pioneer of sorts when it comes to true crime.

ANDREW HUSBAND
drew.husband@metro.us

Filmmaker Joe Berlinger finds himself in a unique position and, he stresses, an entirely unintentional moment in history. On the 30th anniversary of the execution of mass murderer Ted Bundy, Netflix will release his new docuseries "Conversations with a Killer: The Ted Bundy Tapes." A few days after the Ted Bundy documentary starts streaming, Berlinger's first scripted narrative film in a decade — which is also about the infamous killer — will premiere at the Sundance Film Festival.

It all sounds like the result of years of planning and development. It's not.

"It sounds like some grand master plan on my part," Berlinger tells Metro. "It was all very coincidental. The tapes landed on my desk in January of 2017. Stephen Michaud had reached out to me because he was a fan of my work. He had these tapes. He had written a book years ago based on them, but he realized that nobody was doing anything with the tapes themselves. So I took a listen and I thought that it would make an amazing series. We took it to Netflix and they immediately greenlit it."

That explains the Ted Bundy documentary, but what about "Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil and Vile"? The independent film — which stars Zac Efron as Bundy and Lily Collins as his girlfriend, Elizabeth Kloep-fer — was written by Michael Werwie, whose initial script won plenty of recognition before ending up on The Black List's annual listing of popular unproduced screenplays. Berlinger's agent, after hearing about the "Conversations with a Killer" documentary, told the director he should read it. "That made a lightbulb go off, because he went to his pile of cially those who do evil, was an interesting way into this," Berlinger adds. Yet taking on both the scripted and documented versions of the Bundy story also provided Berlinger with something few other true-crime filmmakers have had the chance to do. It gave him the chance to tell different versions of the same story, though not at the expense of the victims or the greater losses incurred by his infamy.

This is especially important to Berlinger since many consider him to be a pioneer of the true-crime genre that, thanks to the likes of the "Serial" podcast and Netflix's "Making a Murderer" documentary series, is enjoying a renaissance of sorts. He recognizes the impact his previous films, like the "Paradise Lost" trilogy, have had on this subject matter. However, the filmmaker is cautious of adopting a celebratory mood about it.

"I wince at that title as much as I understand why I have it, because true-crime filmmaking can sometimes be interpreted as wallowing [in] the misery of others, especially the victims," he says. "However, we can trace the explosion of this kind of content to Bundy himself. For me, Bundy is the big bang for the insatiable appetite that audiences have for this type of programming."

"Conversations with a Killer: The Ted Bundy Tapes" is now on Netflix.

scripts, blew the dust off 'Extremely Wicked' and sent it to me," says Berlinger. "I read it and loved it. I loved the way it made this story, because it wasn't your typical serial-killer movie. It doesn't follow the police as they stumble upon crime scene after crime scene, after which they finally catch the killer. It's through the point of view of the girlfriend and we see Bundy as a believable, loving companion."

The hit series' final season debuts tonight. ALL PHOTOS COMEDY CENTRAL

The final season of 'Broad City' is almost here

The hit Comedy Central series enters its fifth and final season.

ANDREW HUSBAND
drew.husband@metro.us

Tonight is going to be a very important one for Comedy Central. Not only is former "Saturday Night Live" co-head writers Chris Kelly and Sarah Schneider's new show "The Other Two" going to premiere, but "Broad City" season five is going to air the first of its final 10 episodes.

Yes, you read that correctly. The fifth and final season of Abbi Jacobson and Ilana Glazer's comedic TV masterpiece is about to air its final batch of episodes. Their characters, appropriately named Abbi and Ilana, are entering a new phase of their time in New York City. Ilana is starting her own business, while Abbi is turning 30 and coming to grips with the realization that she and her friend are now full-blown adults.

Needless to say, it's going to be an emotional roller coaster for long-time fans of the show. As the pair recently told The Hollywood Reporter, plenty of tears were shed once the decision was made to write the final episodes. "We were sitting across from each other and we were both just crying across from each other at the table," said Jacobson. Glazer added that their reactions "really mirrored the content" of what they were writing and what they hope the viewers at home feel.

What happens in season five?

The first three episodes of the final season were screened for critics, so the particular source of Jacobson and Glazer's tears isn't yet known. Considering what is known, however, it's a good bet that season five is going to pack several significant wallops. Following her 30th birthday, Abbi decides to explore who she is by dating a woman. Ilana, meanwhile, reconnects with Lincoln (Hannibal Buress) to figure out what they mean to each other.

A lot is going to happen this season, which viewers can easily surmise from the final trailer that was released by Comedy Central on Wednesday. Explorations of aging, stealing a stranger's baby for a photo op, kissing a woman for the first time ... "Broad City" season five has it all. So fans of the show will want to make sure to tune in when the premiere airs on Thursday night.

"Broad City" season five premieres tonight at 10 p.m. on Comedy Central.

The arts take on democracy

Heidi Schreck tells her family's very personal story across four generations in "What the Constitution Means to Me," coming soon to Broadway. JOAN MARCUS Winter's hottest trend in art, from museums to Gracie Mansion, is the power of the people.

"What the Constitution Means to Me"

Heidi Schreck paid for college by spending her teenage years winning Constitution-based debate competitions across the U.S. But it's more than just a document, as she reveals in her Broadway-bound play "What the Constitution Means to Me." The personal stories of four generations of her family reveal what we do for the promise of America — her great-grandmother arrived as a mail-order bride from Germany — and the often stark reality (she died of melancholia). Opens March 14, constitutionbroadway.com

"Faith and Empire: Art and Politics in Tibetan Buddhism"

The First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution states: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." To look at what happens when religion meddles in politics, head to the Rubin Museum. The Himalayan art and cultural museum is tackling this issue in the first exhibit of its yearlong theme of power, called "Faith and Empire: Art and Politics in Tibetan Buddhism." Through more than 60 objects from the seventh to the 19th century, "Faith and Empire" looks at Tibetan Buddhism's influence on the empires of Asia and how politics, religion and art meshed

"She Persists: A Century of Women Artists in New York"

The fundamental premise of democracy is the right to vote, but women weren't granted that right until the 19th Amendment was ratified in 1919. On the 100th anniversary of women's suffrage, the Gracie Mansion Conservancy has assembled "She Persists," a group art show that brings together over 60 works by 44 emerging and established female artists working in New York City across 10 decades. Free to visit at the mayor's home, the exhibit includes paintings, sculpture, film, photography, craft and archival materials. Public tours on Mondays starting Feb. 4, nyc.gov

"Power to the People"

As some of the only truly public spaces in the city, New York's parks have a long history of hosting demonstrations and protests dating back to the American Revolution. Central Park's Arsenal Gallery looks at democracy in action with "Power to the People," showing the many ways the people's will has manifested. Artist visions of protests include paintings, mixed media and video curated by the Ebony Society, along with historical images. Through Feb. 28, free, centralpark.com

Onassis Festival 2019: "Democracy Is Coming"

The political experiment that is democracy began in ancient Greece, starting with Cleisthenes. That "ideal form" has changed quite a bit through the centuries, and especially in the leap to modern-day America, all of which will be examined at The Public Theater's Onassis Festival 2019: "Democracy Is Coming." Because Greece was also the birthplace of theater, the annual festival of arts and ideas challenges the idealistic idea of power by and for the people through plays, music, talks and more, with artists and thinkers from both countries. April 10-28, publictheater.org

TRAVEL

PALM SPRINGS CONVENTION AND VISITORS BUREAU

Find out why there is no place on Earth quite like Palm Springs

This oasis in the desert has a little bit of something for everyone.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

As the East Coast is being pummelled by some of the coldest weather we have seen all winter, many of us are finding ways to cope through it all. But whether you find yourself gazing at some photo of a tropical destination you have pinned to your cubicle at work or catching yourself watching reruns of beach themed travel shows when you get home, there is no substitute for an escape during these brutal months. Luckily, United Airlines has introduced a brand new direct flight from Newark Airport to sunny Palm Springs, California, just in time to thaw out for a little while this winter.

With the whole flight lasting just a little over six hours long, any shred of the travel blues will melt away from your face as you walk out into the inviting open-air layout of the Palm Springs International Airport. Located about 100 miles from Los Angeles, this oasis in the desert has a little bit of something for everyone. But, once you've snapped out of your wonderment as you walk by all of the natural palm trees, what can you do to make the most of your stay in this unique city? Here are some things you will need to check out during your stay in Palm Springs.

Where to stay? The Parker Palm Springs Just a 10-minute drive from the airport, the Parker Palm Springs resort and hotel lies hidden back from the street behind a barricade of lush vegetation. With famed designer and author Jonathan Adler acting as the hotel's main creative director, guests will be transported deep into his world. And, oh, is it a great world to get lost in.

While walking the 13-acre compound, you will be able to freely pick oranges and grapefruit from the trees providing shade to the hotel's three different pool areas. For food and drinks, the Parker is home to some of the best restaurants and most forward-thinking cocktail bars the city has to offer. Whether it's steak and scallops for dinner at the dark and sophisticated Mister Parker's restaurant, or small bites cocktails, and local natural wines at their speakeasy bar, Counter Reformation, the Parker has you covered. And if all of this relaxation sends your alignment all out of whack, you can book a massage at the nautical-themed spa and pool area The Palm Springs Yacht Club.

We haven't even talked about the rooms!

Guests will be able to stay in a variety of different rooms including their basic yet luxurious Estate rooms to their private two-bedroom housing unit known as the "Gene Autry" For availability on rooms, head over to parkerpalm-springs.com.

Palm Springs Architectural Tour

One of the most fascinating bits of history about Palm Springs is that in the mid-1900s it was viewed as a refuge for Hollywood studio actors and stars. This was because the city had put a ban on paparazzi from bothering its local residents. This freedom to just blend in with the scenery lead to international stars such as Frank Sinatra, Elvis Presley, and Liberace to call this quirky desert town their home.

With the famous bow-tie-shaped architectural style to allow pedestrians to view the surrounding San Bernardino, Santa Rosa, and San Jacinto mountains with no obstruction, homes in Palm Springs have a vibe that is all their own. Visitors can book their own immersive architectural guided tours with the Modern Tour hosted by Michael Stern, the author of the book "Julius Shulman:

Palm Springs, and the Director and Producer of the film "Julius Shulman: Desert Modern" For booking information, head over to moderntour.com.

Palm Springs Aerial Tramway

As we mentioned before, Palm Springs rests in the bottom of a valley that is surrounded by several different mountain regions. While, at ground level, the desert terrain of the area gives Palm Springs its famous charm, by scaling to the top of these mountains you will find a different climate altogether. But how will you get up there?

The Palm Springs Aerial Tramway is the world's largest rotating tramcar and the quickest way for visitors to scale up to the cliffs of the Chino Canyon. The ten-minute ride will bring you up to an elevation of 2,643 feet giving you access to hiking trails and picturesque views of the city. Word to the wise, just remember to bring some warmer clothes as the peaks are generally 20 degrees cooler than the valley below. For more information on the Aerial Tram, visit pstramway.com.

The Living Desert Zoo & Gardens

Once you've come back down from those tall heights, the Palm Springs Living Desert Zoo & Gardens is the perfect place for the entire family. This botanical garden and zoo focuses on conservation and preservation of animals and wildlife from North America and Africa. Guests can take guided walking and safari tours and even sign up to ride camels and even feed the giraffes. Let me tell you from experience, the joy you will feel coursing through your body after feeding a giraffe out of the palm of your hand is hard to beat. For a unique "night out" experience, older guests can enjoy a beverage as they tour The Living Desert for their Brew at the Zoo event on Feb. 9.

For more information on tours and events at the Living Desert Zoo & Gardens, head to livingdesert.org.

Right now, United Airlines is offering direct flights from Newark to Palm Springs until the end of April. Just in time for you to make it out for the Coachella music festival which will be held a short 45-minute drive away! Round trip flights start at $197, so book yours today! For more information on flights, head over to United.com.

5 ways your flight experience could change in 2019

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

Every year comes with changes, especially to air travel. Airlines launch, shut down or add products that aren't always customer-friendly.

Here are five trends we predict will change your flight experience for the better and worse in 2019.

1. The front of the airplane gets better; the back of the airplane gets worse
It's no secret that the treatment you get from an airline is directly based on how much you pay for your seat. Airlines have conditioned passengers to this behavior since American Airlines started charging for checked bags in 2008. But this year, the divide could grow.

With the expansion of basic economy fares to international routes and the addition of premium economy seats by American carriers for international routes, the gap between cabin classes is only set to get worse. If you plan on traveling as cheaply as possible, expect to lose your right to check your bags, select your seat and possibly using the overhead bin for luggage. If you are looking for additional amenities, consider a regular- or premium-economy seat.

2. Airports turn to even more technology
The 2019 government shutdown illustrates the need for more technology at the airport. With TSA experiments running successfully, be prepared to see automated technology expand across the country this year. Some of the changes you could see in the near future include:

Biometric scanning: Atlanta Hartsfield-Jackson International Airport has one completely biometric terminal, which includes facial recognition scanning to enter security checkpoints and boarding aircraft. If successful, it could be expanded to other American airports. Automatic bin retrieval: Automatic security bin retrieval has proved successful in some major airports. To keep manpower focused on security at TSA checkpoints, more airports may use automation to speed up checkpoint lines. ID scanning at TSA checkpoints: At several major airports, ID scanners are used to validate passengers instead of checking government-issued IDs. With additional testing, it could expand to even more airports.

3. Carry-on luggage is the new normal
It's not uncommon to hear agents ask for volunteers to "gate check" luggage to the final destination. That's because more flyers are trying to avoid a fee for checking them. And airlines are adding more boarding groups, making it even harder for those in the back groups to get all their bags onboard with them.

Unless you are boarding your flight in the first groups, carrying on two bags may be a difficult proposition. If you are primarily a discount traveler, consider getting a travel rewards credit card, which may grant you a free checked bag or fee waivers.

4. Customer service will get less human

While technology is adding even more opportunities to the travel space, it's also automating many tasks we would trust to a human. KLM Royal Dutch Airlines uses an automated system to sort and respond to customer service requests, which are reviewed before they are sent out. It's also common to see self-service kiosks replacing customer service agents for flight and seat change requests.

Between technology adding more self-service options and biometric technology getting better, expect to see fewer airline employees at the airport. If you need to speak to someone urgently, call the airline directly or seek out a gate agent who can help with your request.

5. Smaller airlines may continue to consolidate
In the opening days of 2019, Air France announced they would shut down Joon, their boutique airline focused on younger travelers. Meanwhile, low-cost carrier WOW Air continues to cut routes, after their planned merger with Icelandair failed.

Knicks facing potential fire sale

New York has been regularly seen in trade talks lately.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The NBA's Feb. 7 trade deadline is just two weeks away and the bottom-dwelling New York Knicks look to be one of the more intriguing players on the market at the moment.

At 10-35, the Knicks have the second-worst record in the NBA as their chances of picking up a generational talent like Zion Williams with the top pick of the draft continue to increase.

The lone bright spot to what has been a miserable first season under head coach David Fizdale is, in fact, the future.

With a top draft pick likely on the way, the Knicks are also expected to be major players in free agency, which could result in the acquisition of a superstar like Kevin Durant of the Golden State Warriors. It would make the Knicks Eastern Conference contenders seemingly overnight, but it will be a very different-looking roster when that day comes.

It looks like general manager Scott Perry has made his presence known around the trade deadline as the Knicks have been linked to deals involving multiple players.

Shams Charania of the Athletic reported that the Knicks were one of three teams that called the Dallas Mavericks last year about the availability of second-year point guard Dennis Smith Jr. After taking a backseat to rookie phenom Luka Doncic, Smith may be considered expendable despite a strong showing during his debut season

Tim Hardaway Jr. and many of his Knicks teammates have been involved in trade talks. GETTY IMAGES last year.

The Knicks showed interest in Smith during the 2017 draft but opted to pick the still-developing Frank Ntilikina with the No. 8 pick. The Mavericks took Smith just one selection later.

At 20 years old, Ntilikina has shown little indication of improving a raw offensive game over his first year-and-a-half in the NBA. He's shown promise on the defensive end, but wallowing on a bad team with a logjam in the backcourt that also includes Emmanuel Mudiay and Trey Burke hasn't helped the Frenchman get consistent playing time.

Teams around the league still see Ntilikina as a promising project, though, as the Daily News' Stefan Bondy reported that the Knicks are receiving trade calls about the young guard.

He's not the only one who the Knicks are getting calls about, either.

Mike Vorkunov of the Athletic reported on Wednesday that there has been interest in Tim Hardaway Jr., the Knicks' leading scorer this season with an average 19.6 points per game. Courtney Lee has also been receiving some secondary looks, as well.

Dealing either of those players could see the Knicks contribute even more funds toward their salary cap this summer. Hardaway is owed over $18 million in each of the next two seasons while Lee is owed $12.7 million next year.

Other notable names that have been linked to deals are Noah Vonleh and Enes Kanter, who has fallen out of favor with head coach David Fizdale.

Hayes among Rangers trade assets

With the NHL trade deadline a little over a month away, it seems like just a matter of time before the New York Rangers start wheeling and dealing.

Once a perennial Eastern Conference power, the Rangers are approaching the completion of their first year of the rebuilding process, one that is putting a premium on youth.

Last year's trade deadline provided initial fireworks as the likes of Rick Nash, and Ryan McDonagh was shipped out of town.

This time of year has seen trade talks heat up once again as the Rangers look poised to ship away some more familiar faces.

The two biggest names connected to possible trades (dating to as far back as the summer) have been forwards Mats Zuccarello and Kevin Hayes, two players whose contracts expire at the end of the 2018-19 season.

Both could be seen as valuable rentals for contending teams during the second half of the season. While his better days are behind him, the 31-year-old Zuccarello still has 24 points in 35 games this season and brings a bevy of postseason experience having played in 60 career playoff games.

At 26 years old, Hayes would likely bring back a larger return for the Rangers as he continues to develop into a reliable power forward. Following a career-high 25 goals last season, Hayes has 10 goals and 23 assists through 39 games.

NHL.com's Dan Rosen believes that Hayes could get the Rangers a first-round draft pick while Zuccarello could yield a second rounder. But a suitor needs to be found, first.

At face value, it looks like the Rangers are keeping an eye on the Colorado Avalanche as a potential trade partner as they've sent scouts to a number of their games this month.

With 52 points through 49 games, the Avs are in a dogfight for the final Western Conference playoff spot as seven teams near the bottom of the postseason picture are within four points of each other. After a hot start to the season, Colorado's offense has experienced some inconsistencies, especially when their potent first line is shut down. Either Zuccarello or Hayes would provide some solid scoring depth should the Rangers' asking price be reasonable.

Even Mark Kiszla of the Denver Post wrote that a trade for Hayes "needs to happen."

It wouldn't be a bad idea for the Rangers and Avalanche to get a deal done as soon as possible. With the approaching All-Star game giving teams a mandatory bye week, Hayes would have plenty of time to get out to Denver and acclimate to life with the Avalanche.

For the seventh consecutive year, Roger Clemens and Barry Bonds were left out of the Hall of Fame despite being two of the most dominant players of their era. GETTY IMAGES

WILL WE EVER SEE ROGER CLEMENS, BARRY BONDS IN THE HALL OF FAME?

OPINION

@JoePantorno

Tuesday night brought life-changing news for a quartet of former pro ballplayers as Mariano Rivera, Roy Halladay, Edgar Martinez, and Mike Mussina got the call for enshrinement into the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, NY, the game's most prolific achievement upon its most hallowed grounds.

It's the first time ever that the Baseball Writer's Association of America (BBWAA), have elected two-consecutive four-man classes into the Hall of Fame as the number of inductees is now up to 329. For strictly players, that number is even more inclusive at 232.

That means just around one-percent of the over 19,000 men that have ever suited up to play in a Major League Baseball game have been achieved the honor of induction into the Hall of Fame.

Late January is usually a time of celebration as the game and its fans celebrate the newest members of Cooperstown's fraternity. Yet the past seven years have brought about a debate that has split the baseball world in two with no real resolution on the horizon.

You see, two of the game's greatest players

— Barry Bonds and Roger Clemens — are still not in the Hall of Fame.

By now, you know the numbers of these transcendent stars. Bonds is Major League Baseball's home run king, as much as untold millions won't admit it, slugging 762 home runs with 14 All-Star appearances, seven MVP awards, eight Gold Glove awards, and seven Silver Sluggers. Clemens ranks ninth in MLB history with 354 pitching wins and third in strikeouts cent.

It's been a slow ascent in the polls for both players, who each picked up around 37-percent of the initial vote on their first year of eligibility back in 2013.

DO THEY BELONG?

Now with just three years of eligibility left before they are removed from the ballots completely, the question of whether Bonds and Clemens belong in the Hall of Fame hardest things to do is to hit a round ball with a rounded bat while said ball is traveling at speeds upwards of 100 miles-per-hour. On the pitcher's side, being able to control what is basically a spherical weapon with pinpoint accuracy while deceiving the batter with movements that seem to defy physics is one of the most impressive things in sports.

For the most part, no amount of steroids or PED's could ever diminish those fundamental values, which is why a pitcher with that many strikeouts or a batter with almost 3,000 hits should be in the Hall of Fame.

This is where the anti-induction party makes their strongest point, which is more than valid.

Bonds' claim to fame — the home run — was likely a byproduct of those PED's. Over his first seven years in the majors with the Pittsburgh Pirates, he averaged 25 home runs per season while building his reputation as a five-tool player behind above-average speed and a great glove in left field.

Once he moved to the Giants, Bonds' power numbers inexplicably exploded as he seemingly doubled in size from slender base stealer to gargantuan slugger.

He had eight 40-plus home run seasons, including the record-breaking 73-home-run season in 2001 which will always be attributed to steroids.

For pitchers like Clemens, PED's brings more power to their pitches, allowing hurlers to not only throw the ball faster but to get more revs on it. The more revs on the ball, the more elusive the pitch becomes as it can cut through the zone more effectively.

No one will truly know how many of Clemens' strikeouts were attributed to that unfair advantage.

HOW UNFAIR WAS THEIR ADVANTAGE?

Bonds and Clemens dominated the game in a time where steroid use was common. The Mitchell Report in 2007 uncovered 89 players that used PED's, which is likely only a fraction of the countless ballplayers that turned to steroids to gain an advantage.

With usage seemingly rampant throughout the league, the majors simply have to isolate the steroid era in baseball much as it did with the Deadball Era in the early 1900s.

In the game's earliest days, pitchers were allowed to doctor the ball — most notably with the spitball — that would remain unchanged for a majority of the game. Back then, a ball wasn't swapped out every other pitch or every time it was put in play. One game, one ball.

By game's end, the ball was browned by dirt, spit, tobacco juice, files, or whatever else pitchers could get their hands on to alter the flight of the baseball. But in 1920, the spitball was outlawed and balls were cycled throughout the game, resulting in a major boom in offense that was coupled with the emergence of Babe Ruth.

Jack Chesbro and Ed Walsh were not barred from the Hall of Fame because they utilized an outlawed pitch before it was banned. Neither was Burleigh Grimes, who was still allowed to throw the pitch after its banishment behind a grandfather clause. He pitched until 1934.

Even Don Drysdale or Gaylord Perry, who was suspected of throwing the spitball decades after the ban, are enshrined in Cooperstown.

Both Bonds and Clemens began playing in the 1980s before the league put steroids on the banned substance list in 1991. They didn't even start testing for PED's until 2003, four years before the end of Clemens and Bonds' careers.

If everyone was doing it without proper policing by the league, why should they be punished for being the best of that era? It's something Major League Baseball and the voters have to seriously consider as time is running out on two all-time greats as their induction percentage slowly continues to increase.

HALL OF FAME VOTING TOTALS BY YEAR with 4,672.

Based on numbers alone, these are first-ballot Hall of Famers. Yet their connection to performance-enhancing drugs (PED's) has stained their legacies and denying their entrance into the Hall of Fame.

This was both Clemens and Bonds' seventh year on the ballot and once again, they fell plenty short of the 75-percent of votes needed from the 425 members of the BBWAA. Clemens accrued 59.5-percent of the vote while Bonds picked up 59.1-percent. continues to become a more pressing matter.

It really comes down to just two trains of thought:

1) Barry Bonds and Roger Clemens used PED's to gain an unfair advantage and therefore, should be disqualified from Hall of Fame consideration.

2) Regardless of steroid usage, Barry Bonds and Roger Clemens were the greatest players of their time period and deserve to be among the game's best in Cooperstown.

But if it was only that simple.
